Dear Bente:

When it comes to writing, I must give the impression that everyone lives to be a thousand years old at the rate I am going. There was so much to be done and it appears that some of the things have been accomplished, so now I have a brief pause and a chance to thank you for your beautiful letter.

Both Brigitta and I are looking forward to being with you sometime in May and I know it will be a joyful time.

Give my very best to Bond. I hope he found my answer to his question was not too far from the mark. Thinking is not easy for me, feelings are more abundant.

Affectionately,

Harry
